PRESIDENT STANDS BY PINKHAM

Shafroth Presents Complaints Wilson Will go Into all Facts

Insists on Having Copies of Charges And Letters Furnished to Pinkham—Committee Action Suspended Pending Review of Both Sides

[Special Star-Bulletin Cable]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 25.—Chairman Shafroth of the senate committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico this morning presented to President Wilson the protests made against the confirmation of L. E. Pinkham for governor of Hawaii. The protests, accompanying affidavits and letters embodying the complaints, were given to the president. A majority of the documents had already reached him direct.

The president insisted that copies of the complaints be furnished Pinkham and will receive Pinkham's answer before considering the matter. Chairman Shafroth is preparing copies and sending them to Pinkham at Worcester, Mass.

Action by the senate committee has been suspended pending the president's review of both sides of the controversy.

Organ of Labor Trust Bitter in Denunciation of Conditions Here

Organized Labor, a San Francisco publication controlled by the union labor element of that city, publishes the following article on Hawaii that should draw tears from an image of stone. The picture is one that is pathetic, considering that during the past few years the big city on the coast has been overrun with "pan handlers" who are anxious to secure a dime for "a night's lodgings" owing to the fact that the unions are so hide-bound that they will not allow the willing ones to work, unless they have subscribed to the tenets of the labor trust.

Organized Labor article reads:

HALSEY IS UPHELD BY U.S. ATTORNEY

That securing a divorce would be a shorter route to his impending second marriage than going through the lengthy process of proving that his wife disappeared from his home 11 years ago and that he has not seen her since, is the belief of C. C. Bittling, assistant United States district attorney, in the case of Komoda, a Japanese, who holds that since his wife disappeared in 1902, and that he has every reason to believe that she is dead, he is legally divorced from her and free to marry the "picture bride" who arrived in Honolulu some time ago.

The case was referred to Bittling for his advice by Federal Immigration Inspector Halsey and Attorney Joseph Lightfoot, who is representing the Japanese. The "picture bride," upon her arrival in Honolulu, was detained at the immigration station as is the custom, but was later released on parole, and it is said that she has secured employment at Wahiawa. When Komoda appeared at the immigration station to claim his bride, it was found that he had a wife living in Honolulu in 1902, and in September of that year she disappeared. A systematic search on the part of the husband failed to reveal her identity, and nothing has been heard of her since. When these facts were learned by Inspector Halsey, he refused to permit the marriage on the ground that the Japanese was not legally divorced through his wife's absence. He recommended to the Japanese that he secure a divorce in the usual manner. Bittling upholds that the Japanese is not legally divorced and says that he would better get a divorce than go through the tedious process of going into court and proving the facts surrounding the disappearance of his wife. Bittling further said that thus far the Japanese has made no showing towards this other contention further than his statement concerning the case to his attorney, and this is not deemed sufficient.

HILO, WAKED BY AD CLUB VELS, PLANS REPRISAL

Party of Twenty-five, Uniformed and Lusty of Lung, Coming Here Soon

CIVIC CONVENTION TO BE OCCASION FOR TRIP

Live Wires from Crescent City Will Arrive Prepared to 'Show Honolulu How'

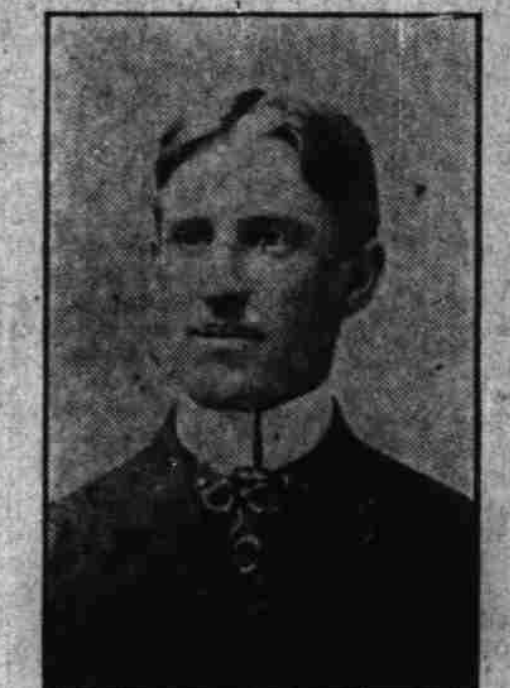

The Ad Club woke Hilo up. Such is the news brought from the Crescent City by one of the live wires who arrived on the Mauna Kea Saturday.

Twenty-five of the representative men of Hilo will arrive in Honolulu for the civic convention next month if the committee in charge of the trip can carry its plans through successfully. What is more, the twenty-five boosters will not sneak in quietly and disperse to their hotels. They will come with a distinct Hilo uniform, with songs and with a battle cry.

"Hilo is awake at last," stated the live wire from that city, "and when the delegation arrives here next month you can look for something to be doing all the time. The visit of the Ad Club woke our city from its sleep and now the boys are planning all sorts of stunts to pull off when they reach Honolulu. One of the features of the trip will be a distinctive uniform, the Ad Club's uniform having made a decided hit up there. The delegation will also have songs on tap and will try to outvie the Ad Club in the noise it can make on arrival here."

"It is a little early as yet to make any definite statement as to numbers but the committee in charge of the arrangements plans to get at least twenty-five of the boys to make the trip. They will all be live wires and they are coming with the fixed determination to do things and to show Honolulu and the Ad Club that Hilo is not the sleepy place it has always had the name of being."

Caminetti is on Trial Tomorrow Sensational White Slave Case

FATHER OF YOUTH A VERY PROMINENT POLITICIAN OF CALIFORNIA

[Special Star-Bulletin Cable]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Drew Caminetti will be brought to trial on a charge of white-slavery tomorrow, the same charge on which his companion, Maury I. Diggs, was found guilty last week. Diggs and Caminetti are accused of eloping from Sacramento to Reno, Nevada, with two young girls. The girls are the principal witnesses used by the prosecution against the accused men.

Caminetti is the son of Anthony Caminetti, former California state senator, former member of congress from California, and, at present, commissioner of immigration under the present Democratic administration. Considerable pressure is said to have been brought to bear to keep the cases from coming to trial, with the result that U. S. Attorney John McNab resigned his office and Attorney-General McReynolds, who was accused of conniving to keep the case from the courts, was forced to bring the matter to an issue. McReynolds, today, now faces charges that may call for his removal from office and it is believed that the Diggs-Caminetti case is at the bottom of the charges.

The keenest interest has centered around this case, which is said to involve a number of prominent business men of Sacramento, who are believed to be financing the defense.

Drew Caminetti, whose trial on a white-slavery charge will commence tomorrow.

ALMOST ROBINSON CRUSOES FAILED TO TRAVEL BY MAP

Had 'First' White Men to Visit 'Desert Isle' Sought Information from Previous White Explorers Landing Might Have Been Made Without Difficulty and 'Hardships'

Deputy City and County Attorney Philip L. Weaver rolled up his sleeves, metaphorically speaking, this morning and wasted into the story that a party of local scientists and dare-devil adventurers had made the first white men's landing on the islands of Moku Manu, north of Mokuapu point, on Friday and Saturday of last week.

Pointing a finger of ridicule—aye and of scorn—at the story brought back by Prof. William A. Bryan and his party of "daring explorers," Attorney Weaver says that they have simply been pottering around, so to speak, in his own back yard, and he declares that he himself and other well known Honoluluans have found no difficulty in landing on the island.

"It certainly jars the folk who have established places on Kaneohe Bay," says Mr. Weaver. Speaking of the matter he says:

"I notice that this morning's paper has a story of adventure, wherein a party of inexperienced men tried to make a landing on Bird Island (Moku Manu), off the Mokuapu coast, and had trouble getting off again, when their water gave out. One of the explorers got his picture in the paper on the strength of perils of the adventure. It is claimed in the article that this party constituted the first white men to land on the island, an that part of the night was spent tracing a way up the three-hundred foot cliff, and that the landing and leaving was a matter of great difficulty, also that the island was unexplored.

"Such a story may be very interesting, but it certainly jars the folk who have established places on Kaneohe Bay to learn that a party has come over from Honolulu, many years after the former have become acquainted with their back yard (which includes the bay and the ocean beyond) and have discovered birds' nests on Bird Island, and that the party was the first white party to land there. It is like going into a man's back yard, climbing his mango tree for 'specimens', and then claiming to be the first white person up the tree.

As Hard to Climb as Punchbowl.
"The island is about as difficult to climb as the side of Punchbowl. If you know its contour. The landing is well known, with large iron bolts set in concrete in the rocks to fasten lines. This does not look like an unexplored island.

"Mr. H. L. Kerr, Mr. William H. Ratten, and I have found no difficulty in landing on the island, such as that described in the article named.

CIVILIAN CLOTHES FOR CLASS A ENLISTED MEN FUNSTON'S PLAN

Department Commander Recommends That Soldiers with Special Privilege Cards Be Allowed to Discard the Uniform on Occasions

Enlisted men of the army stationed on Oahu who have qualified as Class A, under the new plan of "separating the sheep from the goats," inaugurated by General Funston, will likely have the privilege of wearing civilian clothes when in the city. This applies only to privates and non-commissioned officers of the department, who carry "special privilege" cards. The commissioned officers will continue to wear the uniform at all times.

Class A men are those who have shown by their behavior on and off duty that they are worthy of the trust that the special privileges granted implies. They are excused from retreat and check roll call, and are at liberty to come to Honolulu at any time without pass, the card that they carry being their authorization at all times. General Funston believes that these men should be accorded the privilege of wearing civilian clothes when on pass, and he has sent a communication to the war department, recommending that the existing regulation be changed so as to permit certain men in the Hawaiian department to discard the uniform when on pleasure leave.

Past events have shown that General Funston's word bears great weight with the army "higher ups," and if he recommends this change, it is considerably better than an even bet that the change will be ordered. Enlisted men of the department who have secured the special privilege cards that go with Class A rating are overjoyed at General Funston's action.

"No soldier worthy of the name is ashamed of his uniform," said an old-time sergeant, who has a long record for gallantry in action, and efficiency in time of peace, this morning. "But that doesn't alter the fact that there are many 'rookies' and undesirables, who have not always acted so as to reflect credit on the service, and there are many nice people in Honolulu who do not like to be seen on the streets with a soldier for this reason. It is a case where the great majority is made to suffer for the sins of the minority, but the fact remains. Then again, the tropical khaki or olive drab uniform, which is the only one permitted here, is a slipshod affair at best. It hasn't a really military appearance, and is hardly suitable for evening wear, for those of us who have wives and families, and who have been fortunate enough to make friends among the Honolulu people. It will be a great day for the army here when men who have earned the right to wear civilian clothes are permitted to do so."

GEN. HUERTA MUST YIELD WILSON POLICY UPHELD

President Lets It Be Known That He Will Read Message to Congress Unless Dictator Changes Attitude — European Powers and Other Republics Uphold Administration

[Associated Press Cable]

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 25.—President Wilson's firmness in his Mexican policy was shown today when he made it known that unless Gen. Huerta materially modifies his action within 24 hours, the president will personally read before Congress a message summarizing the correspondence on the subject, and outlining his own policy.

The president let this be known today following the receipt of news from Mexico which indicates that Huerta is inclined to be defiant and to insist upon rejecting Lind's mediation plans.

The United States within the last few days has received welcome assurances of cooperation from the European powers and a large number of the South American republics. They give their endorsement to the administration's attitude and deplore a continuation of hostilities in Mexico between the warring factions.

Rosario, who traveled on the Manchuria under the name of Sanches, in company with a woman whom he claims is his wife, admitted that he is Rosario, but emphatically denies any knowledge of the charges made against him.
